

Grace Salyards is a dynamic horn performer and dedicated educator, known for her expressive musicality and love of teaching. She is Contributing Faculty in Horn at Dickinson College, where she performs with the faculty woodwind quintet and brass trio. Grace holds degrees in horn performance from the Eastman School of Music and Penn State University, having studied with renowned musicians Lisa Bontrager, Peter Kurau, Andrew Bain, David Wakefield, and Jennifer Burch.

As an active freelance musician, Grace has performed with a variety of ensembles, including the Lancaster Symphony Orchestra, Allegro Orchestra, Pennsylvania Philharmonic, United States Air Force Band, North Carolina Symphony, Charleston Symphony Orchestra, and the North Carolina Opera and Ballet. She has also led master classes at Messiah University, West Chester University, and Penn State University.

Grace was featured in MSR Classic's Abide With Me, a recording for horns, piano, and soprano, and has performed as a concerto soloist with the Wilson Symphony Orchestra and the Penn State Symphonic Wind Ensemble. Beyond her teaching at Dickinson College, she maintains an active private horn studio in the Hershey area, where she lives with her husband and daughters. She has a particular interest in the natural horn, and outside of music enjoys running, baking, and reading—especially the works of J.R.R. Tolkien.
